

Navigating Academic Writing: ESL Writing Groups

Are you an ESL student who is confused about US academic writing?

Do you wonder what your writing assignments mean?

Do you struggle to talk with your professors and classmates about writing?

Are you unsure about the US conventions of using sources?

Then you need Navigating Academic Writing, free writing groups hosted by the Writers Workshop. These groups are specifically for ESL writers and will meet in 4-week sessions—one for graduate students and one for undergraduate students. Topics include understanding different kinds of writing tasks, understanding instructors' responses, using sources, and reading and note-taking strategies.

In order to participate, you must attend an informational meeting on Tuesday, March 1, 2011

12:30 p.m. for graduate students or

4:00 p.m. for undergraduate students

Room 251 Undergraduate Library

Email wow@illinois.edu by February 28, 2011 to reserve your place.
Be sure to tell us whether you are a graduate or undergraduate student.